New massive pipeline to cross OC

MARGARET TOAL
For The Record

A new, major 750-mile natural gas pipeline, described by the Pipeline Journal as “massive,” is being planned to cross Orange County as it goes from the Permian Basin in West Texas to Calcasieu Parish across the Sabine.

At the end of April, the company mailed letters to property owners informing them of the project and asking for right-of-entry permission to go on the property for surveys.

The 42-inch pipeline will carry “liquids-rich natural gas.” It is known as the DeLa Express Pipeline and is to be built by Moss Lake Partners, a Houston-based corporation. It is to carry 2 billion cubic feet of the gas a day to the industries along the Gulf Coast.

The company says the project will create 5,300 short-term full-time jobs, plus 380 permanent jobs when it is completed.

Moss Lake Partners information says the pre-filing request for the pipeline and its route was made with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in early April this year. The company plans to file the permit in February next year and get the federal agency’s draft environmental impact statement that month.

Then, the preliminary schedule calls for the federal agency to issue its final environmental impact statement in December 2025. Then the timeline sets the agency’s final approval to begin construction in September 2026. July 2028 is the target date for the pipeline to be in use.

According to the company, the proposed pipeline will extend from the Permian Basin, originating at a point near Red Bluff in Loving County, Texas, to a termination point near Moss Bluff in Calcasieu Parish, Louisiana. There will be nine compressor stations proposed for construction in Winkler, Midland, Sterling, Runnels, Brown, Co-

OC Tax Assessor Karen Fisher to retire before term ends

Octavia Guzman

Karen Fisher

MARGARET TOAL
For The Record

Orange County Tax Assessor-Collector Karen Fisher has publicly announced she will be retiring on July 31, months before her term in office ends.

Orange County Commissioners Court, by state law, will be required to appoint her replacement to the elected office. Fisher’s current four-year term does not end until December 31.

Octavia Guzman, a longtime employee in the tax assessor-collector’s office, ran unopposed for the position in the March Republican primary race. No Democrats are running locally on the ballot for the November general election; so Guzman is the expected winner of the position.

Commissioners courts in the past have usually primary winners with no opponents to fill a position of the current elected official decides to retire early. A similar situation came four years ago, when incumbent sheriff Keith Merritt retired and Jimmy Lane Mooney, winner of the 2020 Republican primary, was appointed.

Fisher has some 30 years of experience in the county tax assessor-collector’s office, and is serving her second four-year term as the elected head of the department. She replaced Lynda Gunstream, who decided not to run and retired at the end of her term.

Guzman has 11 years of experience working in the office. That office collects property taxes for all the entities in the county and oversees property sales for delinquent taxes. The office also issues vehicle and boat titles, and new or renewed vehicle and boat licenses.

BC draws people with Saturday farmers market

MARGARET TOAL
For The Record

Starting time is supposed to be eight in the morning. But by five minutes later, the parking lot is full and cars are stopping along ditches. Lines have already formed at booths.

The Bridge City Farmers Market is open on an early summer’s Saturday morning and drawing a crowd to the easy-going, family event where a wide variety of homemade and homegrown goods are found. But of course, it’s the tomatoes, cucumbers, yellow squash and corn in the shucks that draw the biggest lines.

The Bridge City Farmers market is the longest currently open farmers market in Orange County and may be soon be the only one. An unofficial market set-up in Pinehurst last week was run off of a private parking lot. A city official said any street sales in the city limits require a city-issued peddler’s license that needs the property owner’s permission. The group did not have a permit to operate at the shopping center owned by Phelan Investments of Beaumont.

Mauriceville has tried a farmers market for a couple of years on certain Thursdays. But last week, the event didn’t draw vendors or crowds last week. The Mauriceville market, set up by the community center on Cohenor Road, has announced one more try for this summer on Thursday, June 27. Then, a reorganization may be needed.

The Bridge City Farmers Market started about a decade ago and is set up off Parkside Drive off West

“This summer, we are proud to unveil new garden spaces including our newly installed Quilt Gardens and Petrified Forest pathway. Created in collaboration with the Stark Museum of Art’s special quilt exhibition, the Quilt Gardens showcase a fusion of traditional quilting patterns using plants as the medium. A new pathway through the Petrified Forest provides visibility to more than 200,000 pounds of petrified wood from Lutzer Stark’s collection that has been inaccessible to our visitors for years. Sip and Stroll provides a golden opportunity for our guests to enjoy both of these new spaces in a different light,” said Mason.

Please note that outside food and beverages will not be permitted into the venue. The last entry is at 7:30 p.m.

The Bridge City Farmers market is the longest currently open farmers market in Orange County and may be soon be the only one. The Bridge City Farmers Market started about a decade ago and is set up off Parkside Drive off West Roundbunch Road.

Harry Jacob is one of the people at the farmers market who likes to bring a wagon with him to carry all the fresh produce he buys like corn in the shucks.

Roundbunch Road. The grounds include the Bridge City library, community center, splash pad, and youth ball parks.

The event is the place to spend a leisurely Saturday morning visiting with old friends and acquaintances, along with making new ones. As a line wound around a series of long folding tables with bins of fresh vegetables, people chatted across the bins and waved at old friends.

Food trucks were set up in the parking lot offering a variety of items including custom pizza and hot coffee. Nearby, bakers set out displays of fresh minicakes, rolls, breads, cookies, and soft, buttery cinnamon rolls with thick icing that require a wet napkin after eating.

Chosen Weeds Farm brought rich soaps made with moisturizing goat milk and brought an attraction to bring customers. A baby goat on a leash drew a lot of attention from children. The booth also had wooden cutouts of goats with holes to allow people to stick their heads through for a funny photograph.

Paige Price from Nederland provided easy-listening singing with acoustic guitar. She said she attends different farmers markets in the area to perform. The markets are the perfect way for people to get healthy foods, she said, along with others being able to make money from selling their goods.

She was eyeing a booth selling elderberry syrup. It was the best in the area, she said. Elderberry syrup is a popular homeopathic help against cold, flu, and other respiratory problems.

Also, bouquets of colorful zinnias and sunflowers, plus plants were on display for purchase. The Orange County Master Gardeners were there to give plant advice and hand out free wildflower seeds.

Vendors sold homemade jams, jellies, and salsas, along with creative blends of spices and seasons, and original sauces. Shoppers could find original windchimes and leatherwork. Even natural dog treats were on sale.

And speaking of natural, Eclectic Acres Farm based in the county had a variety of poultry, beef, and pork that were grown naturally and butchered in small shops. Their fare included a bag of dog treats consisting of dehydrated chicken feet for pups to gnaw.

Farmers markets are a popular way for consumers to get items that are not overly processed in corporate manufacturing plants. In some cities, the farmers markets go back more than a century. But the popularity of the markets increased in at the turn of the 21st Century.

The city of Orange started a farmers market in October 2008, a month after Hurricane Ike flooded the southern part of Orange County, including the downtown Orange area where the market was first held.

When spring came, the city's Convention and Visitors Bureau, which organized the event, moved it to the parking lot at Lions Park. But within months, the city dropped the market.

However, the original plans for the Riverfront boardwalk and pavilion area included a design to hold a farmers market in downtown near the county courthouse.

After the city of Orange dropped its market, a group of growers then organized and set up a market along MacArthur Drive in the parking lot of the shopping center where Big Lots is located. The market was open on Wednesday and Saturday mornings.

Through the years, the market became unorganized, but growers would still set up their goods on the parking lot on those days.

The same parking lot area grew to become a popular place for selling anything and everything. People driving along MacArthur Drive could see anything from used boats and cars for sale to large household-style garage sales on that parking lot.

BIDEN-TRUMP DEBATE RISKY PLATFORM FIRST TO BE NEXT WEEK JUNE 27

Biden, Trump agree to ABC News and CNN debates. CNN said they won't be allowed to use any props or pre-written notes but will be given paper, a pen and water. The CNN debate is the first of two debates agreed on by the campaigns. The second will be hosted by ABC News on Sept. 10. CNN announced the rules agreed on by both President Joe Biden and Donald Trump's campaigns. They include microphone muting, a coin flip and more when the two candidates face off at the network's Atlanta studio on Thursday, June 27. The debate, which is being moderated by CNN anchors Jake Tapper and Dana Bash, will run for approximately 90 minutes with two commercial breaks. There will be no live studio audience, one major change from debates past. Biden and Trump will stand at podiums decided by a coin flip. Their microphones will be muted unless it is their turn to speak, the network said, which is likely to limit how much the candidates can interrupt one another. The Biden campaign set out some conditions for the debate, including that they be conducted by news organizations, not the bipartisan Commission on Presidential Debates, and Biden, Trump agree to ABC News and CNN debates. CNN said they should have no in-person audience to limit disruptions. This month's debate, the earliest ever in a presidential race, comes before the Republican and Democratic conventions later this summer -- when both Trump and Biden will officially accept their party's nominations.

TURNING BACK THE HANDS OF TIME 10 Years Ago-2014

The invasion that never should have been. Iraq finds itself in a civil war with the problem going way back when Cheney and Rumsfeld talked Geo. W. into invading and occupying Iraq, despite advice from his father, former President Geo. H. Bush, and military experts. The biggest con game was pulled on the American people with claims of Saddam having weapons of mass destruction. It was a lie, they knew it was a lie. We invaded, spent $1 trillion and lost nearly 5,000 young lives, with over 30,000 injured but in the process we destroyed all Iraqi military and cheered when Saddam was hung in public. The truth is Iraq never was a threat to the U.S. Saddam had been our friend. Iraq had great universities and a high middle-class. Saddam ran a tight ship. President Biden on Tuesday announced sweeping new protections for hundreds of thousands of immigrants who have been living in the United States illegally for years but are married to American citizens. President Biden, introduced by First Lady Dr. Jill Biden, detailed the policy at the White House on Tuesday while marking the 12-year anniversary of the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals, or DACA, which protects people who came to the United States as children from deportation. Under the policy, undocumented spouses of U.S. citizens will be shielded from deportation, provided work permits and given a pathway to citizenship. Officials said the announcement could amount to the most sweeping unilateral move by a president to provide relief to unauthorized immigrants since President Barack Obama implemented DACA. The President also announced new ways to help people in DACA, known as Dreamers, gain access to work visas.*Gotta go. Gas pipeline to cross OC From Page 1B ryell, Robertson, Walker, Ector, and Liberty counties in Texas.

Also planned are six lateral pipelines totaling 65 miles with most of those lateral lines in West Texas. However, a pipeline of about 6.2-miles long and with a 42-inch-diameter delivery lateral is set for Calcasieu Parish.

The map posted on the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) website shows the pipeline will cross from Jefferson County and the Neches River into Orange County south of the Vidor area. It will then take jagged turns before going northward across Orange County Precinct 2 and Precinct 1. It will cross the Sabine River near the Newton County line and then go through Calcasieu Parish before ending near the Moss Lake area.

Open houses for information and comments were posted on the FERC website and held earlier this month. The hearings included ones in Beaumont and Vinton. Other hearings were held in Cleveland, Gatesville, Moody, Hearn, and Huntsville.

The pipeline is in the preliminary stages and routes could be changed based on surveys and other information. It might also be affected by this year's presidential election as Republican candidate former-President Donald Trump has campaigned on making it easier for companies to produce and transport oil and natural gas.

"Liquid-rich" natural gas is also known as "wet gas" and is a product of the fracking method. Its uses include as a feedstock for the petrochemical industry to turn into plastics, and for blending into gasoline used for cars and trucks.

Texas' the next Full Moon is the Strawberry Moon

NASA News Release

The next full Moon will be Friday evening, June 21, 2024, appearing opposite the Sun (in Earth-based longitude) at 9:08 PM EDT. This will be Saturday from Greenland and Cape Verde time eastward across Eurasia, Africa, and Australia to the International Date Line in the mid-Pacific. Most commercial calendars will show this full Moon on Saturday, June 22, the date in Coordinated Universal Time (UTC). The Moon will appear full for about three days around this time, from Thursday evening through Sunday morning.

In the 1930s the Maine Farmer's Almanac began publishing "Indian" names for full Moons and these names are now widely known and used. According to this Almanac, as the full Moon in June this is the Strawberry Moon, a name that comes from the relatively short season for harvesting strawberries in the north-eastern United States. Other seasonal names that I have found in various sources (sometimes with conflicting information about whether they are of European or Native American origin) are the Flower Moon, Hot Moon, Hoe Moon, and Planting Moon.

An old European name for this full Moon is the Mead or Honey Moon. Mead is a drink created by fermenting honey mixed with water and sometimes fruits, spices, grains, or hops. In some countries Mead is also called Honey Wine (though in others Honey Wine is made differently). Some writings suggest the time around the end of June was when honey was ready for harvesting, which made this the "sweetest" Moon. The word "honeymoon" traces back to at least the 1500s in Europe. The tradition of calling the first month of marriage the "honeymoon" may be tied to this full Moon because of the custom of marrying in June or because the "Honey Moon" is the "sweetest" Moon of the year. There doesn't appear to be enough evidence to support a 19th century theory that the word entered English from the custom of gifting newlyweds mead for their first month of marriage. utes after sunset until it sets 13 minutes later. The bright object appearing closest to overhead will be the star Arcturus at 69 degrees above the south-southwestern horizon. Arcturus is the brightest star in the constellation Boötes the herdsman or plowman. It is the 4th brightest star in our night sky and is 36.7 light years from us. While it has about the same mass as our Sun, it is about 2.6 billion years older and has used up its core hydrogen, becoming a red giant 25 times the size and 170 times the brightness of our Sun.

As this lunar cycle progresses the background of stars will appear to shift westward each evening (as the Earth moves around the Sun). June 30 will be the first evening that the bright planet Mercury will be above the west-northwestern horizon as evening twilight ends and the first evening that the bright planet Venus will be above the horizon 30 minutes after sunset (an approximation of when Venus will start emerging from the glow of dusk. Mercury will shift to the left low along the horizon, reaching its highest above the horizon (just 2 degrees as twilight ends).

Evening Sky Highlights:

On the evening of Friday, June 21, 2024 (the evening of the day of the full Moon), as twilight ends (at 9:49 PM EDT), the rising Moon will be 7 degrees above the southeastern horizon. The bright planets Venus and Mercury will be below the horizon, with Venus setting 21 minutes and Mercury setting 43 minutes after sunset. Mercury may be visible from about 30 min-

Next best opinion: the perfect day fishing

Predictable summer patterns are now in place

OUTDOORS
Capt. Chuck Uzzle
For The Record

I would bet a sizable sum of money that if most saltwater anglers were to be asked to describe what a picture perfect fishing scenario looks like that I could easily describe it before they even started.

The classic thigh deep flat with clear green water dotted with potholes and very defined grass edges. Or perhaps an even shallower flat with a little less grass so visibility would be at a maximum in order to see cruising fish or even a few tailing reds. These are the images that are continually portrayed to us but just how many of us actually get to experience those scenarios on a regular basis? My guess is that it's far fewer than most think and in all reality only a small percentage of anglers actually ever get to experience them. In fact, instead of stepping into a "coastal version" of a Norman Rockwell painting most of the fishing community actually looks for the "next best option".

I'll be the first to admit that at times I am ridiculously jealous of my friends on the middle and lower coast. I'm just like the average guy who sees all the videos and pictures on social media depicting the perfect conditions that many anglers would kill to have. The one that gets me the most are when its blowing 20-25 mph in a video and it looks like barely a ripple because the water that's being fished is so shallow.

Take the same conditions on the upper coast and you need to have the Coast Guard on speed dial to be sure you can get back to the dock. I would love to have that type of environment to fish in but the upper coast is a different animal, not worse, just different.

On our home waters of Sabine and Calcasieu the conditions are far from the classic scenario that was described earlier, in fact its almost 180 degrees different. Basically we have deeper and dirtier water with little to no grass and very little sand so even when the water is clear it looks muddy due to no contrast. The option to go wade fish grass flats with potholes turns into drifting scattered shell along muddy bottoms. Although the patterns differ so greatly from venues farther to the south we make it work despite the conditions.

Dow Gene Anderson of Bridge City figured out the pattern for the redfish and it turned into a great day on the water.

Speaking of patterns, the heat has finally set in on us and the predictable summer patterns are now in full swing. One particular pattern that draws attention on upper coast venues, especially Sabine, is chasing flocks of gulls

Embracing 'the local' at farmers markets

What to know about nutrition and safety

Susan Himes
Texas A&M AgriLife

Unless you are lucky enough to have a vegetable garden of your own, you'd be hard-pressed to find produce that tastes fresher or lasts longer than what your local farmers market has to offer, according to Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service experts.

In addition to accessing delicious food, shopping at a local farmers market can also be a good way to support local agriculture and keep your dollars in the local economy.

"It's likely that the farmer is going to pick their produce at peak quality because they're going to sell it right away," said Jenna Anding, Ph.D., AgriLife Extension nutrition specialist and professor in the Texas A&M Department of Nutrition. "So, by shopping at a farmers market you'll typically get the produce at peak quality when it's in season."

Anding said while most Texans come up severely short in the amount of vegetables they consume each day, the produce at a farmers market may taste better, so they may eat more of it. Going to the market is also a great way to get children more excited about eating vegetables by letting them pick out what they want and perhaps pique their interest in trying something new.

More than just vegetables

In addition to the vegetables and fruits, the variety of products sold at many farmers markets has increased, which creates the need for consumers to be more careful and informed, the AgriLife Extension experts said.

"Farmers markets can be a good place to buy things like honey, jams and jellies, and eggs, but consumers need to keep safety and consumer common-sense in mind," said Rebecca Dittmar, AgriLife Extension program specialist for the food safety education program in Kerrville.

From what to look for to what to avoid, our AgriLife Extension experts shared what consumers should know before they grab their basket or shopping bags and head out to a farmers market.

Think nutrition

"Generally speaking, the nutritional content of fresh produce bought at a local farmers market is higher because it is usually harvested and then immediately sold," Anding

Honey is one of many local products you can often find at a farmers market. (Laura McKenzie/Texas A&M AgriLife) said. "For example, one study found that three days after harvest, some produce has lost 30% of its vitamin C. That is also a good reason not to buy more produce than your family will eat, especially if nutrient quality is a concern."

Anding said if you know you aren't going to eat all of what you bought immediately, eat what will not freeze well first. The sooner you freeze fresh produce, the more nutrients it can retain.

"The longer produce stays in storage and the longer it takes to get to the grocery store and then into a consumer's home, the more nutritional quality is lost," Anding said. "But at the end of the day, any vegetable is better than no vegetables. If you don't have access to a farmers market, then the frozen and canned vegetable options at a grocery store are usually cheaper

TPWC's new deer carcass disposal rules approved

Staff Report - For The Record

AUSTIN — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission approved statewide deer carcass disposal regulations during its May meeting in an effort to reduce the risk of transmission of Chronic Wasting Disease (CWD) across the state. For most hunters, these new regulations do not change how they currently care for their deer after harvest.

"Proper disposal of all potentially infectious material is critical for reducing the risk of disease transmission," said Blaise Korzekwa, TPWD White-tailed Deer Program Leader. "These new regulations provide hunters more options when it comes to processing their deer to reduce that risk. If CWD is not managed and efforts are not made to mitigate potential spread of the disease, the implications for Texas and its multibillion-dollar ranching, hunting, wildlife management and real estate economies could be significant."

The new regulations, which will take effect during the upcoming hunting season, will allow hunters to debone a carcass at the site of harvest, provided proof of sex and tags are maintained until the hunter reaches the final destination. By leaving the unused parts at the site of harvest, the chance of spreading CWD to other parts of the state is greatly reduced. Meat from each deboned carcass must remain in whole muscle groups (i.e. not chopped, sliced or ground) and maintained in a separate bag, package or container until reaching the final destination.

These disposal measures apply only to unused carcass parts from native deer (i.e. white-tailed deer and mule deer) harvested in Texas that are being transported from the property of harvest. If carcass parts from native deer species are not being transported from the property of harvest, these carcass disposal rules would not apply.

Since many hunters take their harvest to a commercial processor, it will be the processor who then properly disposes unused parts for them. For hunters processing deer at home, disposal in a commercial trash service is preferred, but other options are available.

Acceptable disposal options include:

- Directly or indirectly disposing of the remains at a landfill permitted by the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality to receive such wastes,

- Burying the carcass at a depth of no less than three feet below the natural surface of the ground and covered with at least three feet of earthen material, or

- Returned to the property where the animal was harvested.

For more information visit the CWD page or contact a wildlife biologist.

This week's Texas Gulf Coast Fishing Reports was compiled by Texas Parks and Wildlife Department

• Sabine Lake

GOOD. 86 degrees. Limits of speckled trout at the jetties with good numbers of sheepshead, drum and redfish on live shrimp under a popping cork. During incoming tides work your way along the shell flats and rock piles in the Sabine Channel for nice catches of redfish and trout.

Another influx of freshwater in Sabine Lake has pushed redfish and trout into the marshes. Some catches on the points and drops in the bayou live shrimp under a popping cork. Very little bird action on Sabine Lake.

A North Levee between the first and second pike produces nice speckled trout, redfish and flounder. Watch the weather forecast for inclement weather.

Report by Captain Randy Foreman, Captain Randy's Guide Service Sabine Lake.

• Bolivar

GOOD. 82 degrees. Water levels are perfect with tides and low wind this week changing back to four tide days over the weekend. Still some fresh water on the bay side but it hasn't affected the bite. People are still catching plenty of redfish of varying sizes everywhere! Small croakers along with sand trout, sheepshead, black drum, speckled trout, and crabs caught along the jetty with plenty of stingrays and sharks. Pompano and Jack Crevalle are still running.

The surf is producing redfish and black drum, gafftop, lots of stingrays, and bigger sharks along the whole peninsula. The sargassum, seaweed, is thick in spots and it is less if you move 100-200 yards. People are using a variety of bait this past week with awesome results.

Report by Captain Shane Rilat, North Jetty Bait Camp.

• Trinity Bay

SLOW. 85 degrees. Trinity Bay is still recovering from the influx of freshwater and is dirty and off-colored. The ship channel and spoil islands are holding some black drum, sheepshead, a few redfish and trout. The best bite is on live shrimp. Report by Captain David Dillman, Galveston Bay Charter Fishing.

Water is muddy and still really fresh due to the influx of freshwater. Few people are catching fish but really having to work hard for them. We should see a change coming in the next couple weeks as the discharge rates for San Jacinto and Trinity River have declined tremendously.

Reports of good trout and redfish being caught by redfish island and by the ship channel free lining shrimp. Report of a few reds being caught in Anahuac mid to lower East shoreline. Trinity Bay is at 1.8-2.2 PSU on salinity levels. Report by Captain Zackary Scott, Zack Attack Fishing.

• East Galveston Bay

GOOD. 86 degrees. The bay is off-colored water, but anglers throwing dark colored soft plastics are catching speckled trout over the reefs and on the shorelines. Report by Captain David Dillman, Galveston Bay Charter Fishing. East Bay and Intra-coastal waterway are holding plenty of small speckled trout, black drum, sheepshead, and redfish caught on live shrimp, croakers, and top-water lures. Report by Captain Shane Rilat, North Jetty Bait Camp.

Surface water temperature 83 degrees in East Galveston Bay. As in previous weeks, the water clarity is still stirred up more than usual with all the freshwater entering the bay system from the heavy rains up above us. We are still finding good numbers of trout on the protected shorelines over shell pockets, and are having to weed thru a large number of small fish to find the solid females, as well as redfish along the grass lines and over shell with the higher tides, and a few nice flounder busting bait up around grass lines with good current flow.

If you see nervous bait flipping on the surface the fish are close by, if not, you are best to move on to another spot, after making a few casts. The lighter the jig head the better 1/16 to 1/8 ounce, determined by the wind and current, and tails with paddles, are still

• Galveston Bay

SLOW. 85 degrees. Salinity levels are on the rise and anglers are finding a few speckled trout along the west shoreline. Better numbers of black drum and sheepshead being caught on live shrimp. Report by Captain David Dillman, Galveston Bay Charter Fishing.

• West Galveston Bay

GOOD. 87 degrees. Speckled trout bite has slowed, but anglers are still reporting steady catches. A few black drum and reds are being caught, along with some jackfish. Live bait supplies have been limited, with live croaker being the hardest to find. Report by Captain David Dillman, Galveston Bay Charter Fishing.

• Freeport

GOOD. 85 degrees. Trout, redfish and flounder are good around the San Luis Pass. Bastrop Bay, Christmas Bay, Chocolate Bay and the west end of Galveston Bay has been producing trout, gafftop and redfish fishing under the birds using shrimps under a popping cork or gulp shrimp. Wade fishing has been good in the guts at the pass with croaker and shrimp for catches of trout, redfish and a few flounder mixed in. The Freeport Harbor has been steady for sheepshead, drum, redfish and mangrove snapper free lining shrimp with a split shot. Report by Captain Jake Brown, Flattie Daddy Fishing Adventures.

• Texas City

FAIR. 84 degrees. Good numbers of speckled trout being caught in lower Galveston Bay. North jetty producing limits of trout, a few redfish, sheepshead, and black drum on live shrimp. Red snapper catches have been good 50 plus miles offshore. Report by Captain David Dillman, Galveston Bay Charter Fishing.

Anglers continue to catch plenty of speckled trout, redfish, and flounder everyday with some occasional black drum, sheepshead, sand trout, and gafftop. Limits can be caught near Mosquito Island and the Moses Lake Tidal Gate. Along the dike has been successful near shrimp boats, docks and piers. Live shrimp and finger mullet have been the best baits.

'The Lakes' Fishing

• Toledo Bend Fishing Report

GOOD. Water slightly stained; 80 degrees; 0.77 feet above pool.

The lake level is over full and flood gates are back open. They have five gates open at 1 foot each. It is flooding north of the lake now, so lots of water is still to come. Bass fishing has been fair, lots of fish being caught in the flooded bushes and hay grass from 1-4 feet with topwaters, frogs and spinnerbaits been best.

There are still lots of fish out in 10-18 feet, but with water back on rise, they have got harder to catch. Crankbaits and Texas rigs will catch these. We just need some sunshine for a week or so to get it back to normal. Crappie fishing has been hard. Most reports are 12-18 fish per boat. Deeper docks and brush piles are the best with jigs and live bait.

Report by Stephen Johnston, Johnston Fishing.

• Sam Rayburn

GOOD. Water stained; 85 degrees; 7.67 feet above pool. Due to the rise in lake level there is a lot of submerged vegetation scattering the fish. Those anglers that like to flip brush for bass this is your time to shine. Small bass are biting off points with Carolina rigs and jigs. Some crappie are shallow in flooded brush, and in stand ups in 12-15 feet of water.

White bass are good on points with jigging spoons. Catfish are in deeper creek channel points. Report by Captain Lynn Atkinson, Reel Um N Guide Service. After the recent rains the water is still on the rise, but we should start to see the lake level off because there is a break in the rainy weather. Bass are shallow in flooded bushes and trees in 4-10 feet of water.

Large population of fish off shore on primary and secondary points in 12-18 feet of water in relation to shoreline flooded bushes. Use Texas rigs, spinnerbaits, chatterbaits and topwater frogs shallow. The offshore bite is on deep diving crankbaits, Carolina rigs, and jigs.

Report by Captain Hank Harrison, Double H Precision Fishing.

Protect pets during the dog days of summer

Experts share considerations for summer heat safety

Sarah Fuller
Texas A&M AgriLife

With the sweltering dog days of summer fast approaching, Texas A&M AgriLife experts encourage Texans to incorporate precautions to protect pets from heat stress.

“Much of the advice we give pet owners is common sense, but there are definitely special considerations depending on the animal’s age and breed, as well as the activity you are engaged in,” said Catherine Campbell, DVM, veterinary diagnostician with the Texas A&M Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratory, Bryan-College Station.

Water, shade and ventilation are key

Proper hydration is vital for animal health, but it is just one component of ensuring proper thermoregulation.

“Access to cool, clean water is critical, but it is also imperative that they are given shade with adequate airflow,” Campbell said. “This can be provided by trees or a structure like a patio, but I don’t recommend a confined doghouse as that environment can become stagnant.”

The same principles also apply to livestock animals that may be confined to a structure, such as backyard chickens.

“I’ve actually assembled a water misting system in my chicken run that comes on during the hottest parts of the day,” Campbell said. “It significantly drops the temperature, and the chickens love it.”

Another backyard-friendly option is to use the shallow, hard plastic children’s pools sold at retail stores. Campbell said these are a great option for dogs as long as they can safely exit the water. Frozen plastic jugs of water that an animal can lie against also provide relief.

Limit pet activity based on temperature

While exercise is important for pet health, Campbell recommends avoiding strenuous activities during the heat of the day.

“Limit walking pets to the early morning or late evening hours,” Campbell said.

In urban areas that contain more pavement, ambient temperature isn’t the only concern.

“Pavement and blacktop can easily be 30 or more degrees hotter than the surrounding air temperature,” she said. “Paws exposed to hot concrete or asphalt can easily burn.”

One way to test pavement for heat safety is to place the back of your hand on the surface for 7-10 seconds. If the pavement temperature is uncomfortable or too hot for your skin, it is too hot for your pet.

Although owners can purchase protective shoe-like covers to protect paws, Campbell recommends leaving pets at home if attending events where this exposure is possible, such as summer festivals.

Needs vary based on age, breed

Even in the safety of a backyard, some pets require extra consideration.

“Heat index and humidity are a special concern, especially with older pets, those with heart conditions or brachycephalic breeds,” Campbell said.

Brachycephalic animals are characterized by wide heads and shortened or snub-nosed snouts. This includes popular dog breeds such as French bulldogs, English bulldogs and Boston terriers, as well as cat breeds like Persian and Himalayan.

“These animals are not able to tolerate heat very well,” Campbell said. “They have a very shortened airway, small tracheas, and they cannot adequately transfer air to drop their body temperature.”

Humid conditions can exacerbate this difficulty breathing.

“They are very susceptible to heat stress and heat stroke, even with temperatures in the upper 80s,” she said. “You’re better off leaving them inside of your house when possible.”

Campbell said while heavy breathing is a normal response among dogs and cats attempting to cool off, excessive and prolonged panting is a certain sign of stress.

“A very rapid respiratory rate, rapid heart rate, staggering or drooling are definite signs that your pet is very distressed and requires attention,” Campbell said. “Immediately take them indoors or in the shade, provide water and try to keep them calm and still.”

If the animal’s condition does not improve or deteriorates, seek medical attention from a veterinarian.

Cyanobacteria awareness

Although natural waterbodies provide respite from heat for both animals and humans, fatal cases of cyanobacteria exposure among dogs have caused many pet owners to think twice before allowing their pets to take the plunge.

Brittany Chesser, Texas A&M AgriLife Extension

Service aquatic vegetation management program specialist and lead diagnostic scientist at AgriLife Extension’s Aquatic Diagnostics Laboratory, said while the presence of bright green or blue mats is an indication of cyanobacteria presence, it should not be the only characteristic pet or livestock owners look for when assessing a waterbody.

“Cyanobacteria can appear in many shades, including purple or red,” she said. “Depending on species, they may exhibit as different colors, an oily sheen on the water, or have no color at all.”

Aside from color, the presence of dead or dying aquatic organisms such as fish, frogs or turtles should raise concern.

“You may see fish die off in a localized area of more shallow, stagnant waters,” Chesser said. “That could be an indicator that a bloom may be present.”

Chesser and Campbell said while they don’t want to impart unnecessary fear regarding the possible presence of cyanobacteria, sickness and mortality can occur in pets and livestock, so it is best to be aware of potential indicators or news reports of blooms in your area.

“It’s important to remain mindful of your pets as well as potential environmental dangers wherever you go this summer,” Campbell said.

“Pay attention to the signs your pet is giving you, use common sense and seek medical assistance for your animal when needed.”

Farmers Market

and can have more nutrition than a grocery store’s fresh options.”

Think local

Make sure what you’re buying is actually local if you aim to support agriculture in your area. Don’t hesitate to ask the seller where it was grown and what farm it came from. Even if they are not the producer, they should be able to give you that information.

Nobody wants to buy produce that was just repackaged from a big box store to look local. Produce can cost more at a farmers market too, so make sure what you buy is as advertised.

Do keep in mind, though, that not all regions in Texas grow the same produce and some types may need to be brought over from a different region.

“For example, it costs money to truck produce to San Angelo that’s been grown in Poteet,” Anding said. “There is an added cost to get those strawberries up to the Concho Valley, and the consumer needs to take that into account that producers have to price accordingly.”

And while some things may cost more at a farmers market, some things may cost less. It is a good idea to check prices at your usual grocery store, so you have a reference point. Organic fruits and vegetables may be cheaper than what you’d find in the market, so don’t be afraid to question if something is organic or not. If so, you need to ask how the growers define that term.

There are about 400 acres of planted strawberries in Texas. (Sam Craft/Texas A&M AgriLife)

Think seasonal

A farmers market isn’t typically going to have as wide of a selection of produce as your local grocery store. But farmers markets will have in-season produce that hasn’t been shipped from out of state or even from another country. The freshest fruit and vegetables are the ones most recently picked, so embrace what is growing in Texas each season.

“You’re probably not going to see a whole lot of cut leafy greens right now because it’s more of a winter vegetable,” Anding said. “But warm season produce like tomatoes, cucumbers and squash, and fruits like blackberries should be bountiful.”

Your local farmers market might also be a great place to explore a veggie or fruit you haven’t tried before. Sellers are almost always happy to offer advice on how to cook or prepare that unknown, alien-looking squash.

Think food safety

Produce is protected by its skin. Look for a fruit or half of a watermelon. Just as you’d clean produce bought from a grocery store, take the same care with what you buy at the farmers market.

If buying eggs, Dittmar said they must always be kept below 45 degrees. It’s OK if a seller has a carton on display just for looks, but make sure what you are buying is taken from a refrigerated unit. Also check to ensure the eggs are clean and there are no breaks or cracks in the shells. If you discover one after purchase, make sure you discard it. Egg sellers must have a temporary food establishment license and eggs must be properly labeled as “ungraded” with safe handling instructions.

To be an informed consumer, know the rules established by the Texas Department of Agriculture that sellers must follow. For example, raw milk and any products made from raw milk cannot be sold at a farmers market. For homemade products like honey and jam, the cottage food industry rules apply.

“I think consumers educating themselves before they go shopping is critical,” Dittmar said. “Having a basic understanding of the rules and knowing what questions to ask is important to keep your family safe.”

She said it is also fine to ask about how the produce provider controls weeds and pests and the type of water used to irrigate crops.

“Farmers markets are a great opportunity to get to know producers in your area,” Dittmar said. “Local growers take great pride in their products and care about their reputation, but it’s always good to use common sense, and it’s never wrong to ask a question.”

Time is everything when storing tomatoes

Tips to keep tomatoes, from 'breakers' to ripened red

Susan Himes
Texas A&M AgriLife

One of the simple joys of summer is access to great-tasting tomatoes.

Whether grown and picked at "color break" from a home garden or bought fully ripened at a local farmers market or grocery store, tomatoes are a treat.

Green tomatoes on a vine growing against the red of a fence

There are some tips and tricks to help you get the most from your tomato harvest or purchase, according to a Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service expert. Joe Masabni, Ph.D., AgriLife Extension small-acreage horticulturist at the Texas A&M AgriLife Research and Extension Center in Dallas and professor in the Department of Horticultural Sciences, shared his expert advice on storing and extending the life of tomatoes without compromising taste.

Timing is everything

Nothing will taste as great as a tomato at its peak, so timing is a major factor to consider when ripening tomatoes.

They can ripen in days or weeks, depending on the variety and stage at which they were picked, so buy or

Any tomato that has reached the breaker stage is considered vine ripened and can be picked. (Laura McKenzie/Texas A&M AgriLife) pick accordingly.

If all your tomato plants are full simultaneously and there is no possible way to eat them as fast as they need to be picked, there are ways to space out the ripening process to allow for extended use.

Any tomato reaching the "breaker stage" will continue to ripen off the vine, Masabni said. This is the stage where the bottom of the tomato has started to change from green to yellow.

Five tomatoes in a row shown in different stages of ripening from left to right starting with green and ending with bright red

The best place to let tomatoes ripen is on your kitchen counter. Ideally, ripe or ripening tomatoes prefer temperatures around the mid-60s, but Masabni said room temperature in most homes is fine.

However, breaker-stage tomatoes can be stored in a refrigerator to halt the ripening process. This allows you to pull them from the fridge and let them ripen as needed.

Once the tomatoes are at room temperature again, they will usually continue the ripening process over several days.

If you've picked an entirely green tomato, it will not ever ripen. It's best to use these for a favorite recipe, like a relish or fried green tomatoes.

Vine ripening, or not

Tomatoes in various shades of green and red ripening on the vine.

Once a tomato is at the breaker stage, it can be classified as vine ripened. Even though it doesn't look ripe yet, it has all the sugars and essential compounds necessary for it to reach its mature color and full flavor.

"Once it's physiologically ripe, it is considered vine ripened and can be picked and marketed as such," Masabni said.

For gardeners, while it may seem like a good idea to keep the tomato on the vine until you are ready to eat it, the longer it is on the vine, the more likely it is to be eaten by birds or bugs.

If you can protect your tomato plants from pests that is best, but don't have any qualms about picking your tomatoes and allowing them to finish ripening off the vine, because they will still have that same wonderful flavor.

Best way to store tomatoes

Make sure you store the tomatoes with a little space between them on the counter or in a container to allow air circulation, Masabni said.

"Tomatoes should be stored how you see them at the market – out in the open," he said. "Consumers often do it wrong – they treat onions like tomatoes and tomatoes like onions when it comes to storage. Keep your onions in the refrigerator, not the counter or the pantry."

Do not keep tomatoes in a closed bag unless you want to hasten the ripening process. Ethylene gas produced by tomatoes ripens them quicker when held in the bag.

Tomatoes will also ripen more quickly if left in warmer temperatures, like on a porch or in an outbuilding. This can happen quickly, so you'll want to check on them daily in temperatures above 80 degrees.

Refrigeration can alter taste

As a rule of thumb, Masabni suggested not refrigerating ripe tomatoes whenever possible.

"Do not refrigerate ripe tomatoes unless you just can't eat them," Masabni said. "Refrigerators can affect the taste and texture of a ripe tomato, so let them ripen on a counter and then eat or cook with them."

But for gardeners who have more than they can eat or share with friends and family, refrigeration is a way to extend the shelf life.

Let no tomato go to waste

If you have more tomatoes than you can eat, consider using them in salsa and other recipes. If they are just a little past their prime, they can also be turned into sauces.

Romas can be used to make tomato paste, but detecting if a Roma is still good is tough since they stay firm even after they go bad inside. Whole tomatoes may also be frozen to use in stews or cooked dishes.

"The only time a tomato is garbage is if it's starting to be mushy," he said.

and terns that feed over schooling speckled trout and redfish. For some reason the schooling activity seems to be more consistent for keeper sized fish on upper coast bays compared to those farther south. In fact, many guides in places like Matagorda won't even stop and fish under the birds because the catch to keeper ratio is decidedly not in their favor. A flock of working gulls on Sabine or Calcasieu could mean a school full of fish pushing 20 inches or better so we never pass up that opportunity. I have even seen speckled trout over 8 pounds caught under the birds so as you can imagine if I have any say in the matter we will always make a stop and investigate.

Fishing under the birds is not fool proof and it does have its drawbacks so be prepared. If you have a crowd in your boat be sure to position yourself where everyone is casting out of the same side in order to minimize risk. Also using single hooked lures, such as soft plastics on a jighead, with the barb pinched down is preferred. The single hook is much easier to deal with in both a crowd or during a frenzy when the fish are active. Nothing is more annoying than digging hooks out of a landing net or each other when you could be catching fish instead.

Another unwanted hazard that usually comes with chasing fish under the birds is inevitably catching a catfish, usually a gafftop or sometimes a hardhead. Take great caution when landing and unhooking these fish as they will flat ruin your day if you get stuck with one of their fins. Be sure to clean any wound thoroughly and apply proper first aid, especially with the threat of both infection and potentially the vibrio virus.

If for some reason the birds are uncooperative another pattern that draws plenty of attention during the summer is fishing structure. On top of the list of pieces of structure has to be the jetties, hands down. The jetty systems are fish magnets and can provide some outstanding fishing when conditions are right. Tide changes are without a doubt the key to probing the jetty as they are usually the first places in the lake or bay to feel the influence of the moving water. A good tide change right before first light is one of my favorite times to be on the rocks with a big topwater or swimbait. Casting parallel to the rocks tends to produce better but a perpendicular presentation will also work well, especially when throwing jigs and allowing them to bump the rocks all the way down.

Perhaps one of the most overlooked pieces of structure on either Sabine or Calcasieu are the shell pads that surround many of the well heads in each bay. Many anglers never even attempt to look for these hidden gems much less fish them. I was introduced to this pattern years ago by good friend Jim Leavelle one day while we fished Trinity Bay and I am a believer in the technique.

Just because you may not have the picture perfect set up doesn't mean you can't pattern and find fish on your own water. There are plenty of options out there as long as you are willing to think outside the box and put in the time to get it figured out. Once you run across one of these new unexplored areas and begin to have some success it will motivate you to find more areas which in turn will your time on the water that much more successful.

Gift of Life screenings set for Orange this summer

Margaret Toal
For The Record

Men in Orange County will get a chance for free medical screenings on Saturday, July 13, with the Julie Rogers Gift of Life program. Plus, women have a chance for free mammograms during special days of the summer.

Norma Sampson, executive director of the Southeast Texas charity, went before Orange County Commissioners Court Tuesday to talk about the group's medical programs because June is National Men's Health Month.

The Gift of Life program provides free screenings, referrals, and help with cancer screenings for people with no health insurance or assistance that provides the screenings.

Sampson the men may also use the screening program if they have insurance, but it does not cover the costs of the screenings.

The July 13 screenings for men will start at 9 a.m. in the lobby of the former hospital on Strickland Drive. She said the tests are non-invasive, with the prostate screening test being able to show whether the man needs more intense testing.

The tests will also include a cholesterol panel, plus checks for infectious disease, blood pressure, and blood glucose. A physician will be on site for consultations, if needed.

Appointments may be made through the website giftoflifebmt.org, or by calling 409-833-3663. Walk-ins will also be welcomed.

Sampson said that not only will the men get free screenings, but they will also get a free lunch along with a $25 HEB gift card.

The Gift of Life also offers free mammograms for people who live in Southeast Texas, have limited income, and do not have private insurance, Medicaid or Medicare.

The mammograms are usually for those age 40 or older, but exceptions may be made.

The mammograms will be offered on Wednesdays June 12, July 10, August 14, and September 11. The hours are 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and will be at 610 Strickland Drive, Suite 184, in Orange. More information is available through 409-833-3663, or the website giftoflifebmt.org.

Resisting Grumbling Obedience

Joe Rigney
Teacher
desiringGod.org

If you were giving an exhortation to an obedient people, what temptations would you urge them to guard against? Most of us would likely highlight the danger of pride and self-righteousness. And we'd be right to do so.

In his letter to the Philippians, Paul is addressing an obedient people. Unlike the Galatians or Corinthians, Paul does not write to them in order to rebuke and correct substantial failures and errors. Outside exhorting a few quarreling women, there isn't a hint of "You foolish Galatians!" (Galatians 3:1) or "Are you not of the flesh and behaving only in a human way?" (1 Corinthians 3:3). Instead, to the Philippians, Paul says, "As you have always obeyed, so now, not only as in my presence but much more in my absence" (Philippians 2:12). The Philippians are an obedient people.

So how does Paul exhort them? What does he see as a key danger for this obedient people?

Do all things without grumbling or disputing, that you may be blameless and innocent, children of God without blemish in the midst of a crooked and twisted generation, among whom you shine as lights in the world, holding fast to the word of life, so that in the day of Christ I may be proud that I did not run in vain or labor in vain. (Philippians 2:14-16)

Grumbling and Disputing

A major temptation for the obedient is to murmur and grumble in our obedience. That's why Paul says to do everything without grumbling or disputing, without murmuring or complaining, without sulking or arguing, without whining or backtalk. A temptation for an obedient people is to offer frustrated, grumbling obedience.

In other words, Paul is clear that how we obey matters. The spirit beneath our actions matters. God's standard and expectation for us isn't merely to obey.

This means that partial obedience is disobedience. Delayed obedience is disobedience. And grumbling obedience, irritated obedience, frustrated obedience is disobedience.

Confronting Reluctance

We each have various sources of hardship and frustration in our lives. It might be a boss or a co-worker. It might be a tone of voice or an annoying habit from your spouse or child or parent or sibling or friend. It might be a deep unmet desire, like the desire to be married.

Whatever the frustration, how often do you find yourself attempting to obey God while muttering and murmuring about the hardship? How often is there a hitch in your obedience, or an edge to your obedience, or self-pity in your obedience?

Now some of us grumble directly about God. "Why is he doing this to me?" Or we grumble about our circumstances, conveniently "forgetting" the truth that nothing comes into our lives except by his hand. Others of us grumble about people. We disguise our complaints against God by focusing them on the people around us.

This is precisely where we must press. It is important to distinguish faithful groaning from ungodly grumbling, lamenting from sulking. Groaning and lamenting can be good and right. They can be faithful responses to real pain. So what distinguishes them from grumbling and sinful complaining? Often, it's honesty. Do we take the pain to God directly, or does it come out sideways, as complaints about God's wisdom disguised as observations about other people?

Murmuring in Marriage

We can press this truth into our marriages. Simply put, grumbling obedience is a marriage killer. Mumbling exposes that you're in the comparison trap and that you're keeping score. Which of us has the tougher job? Who has sacrificed more? Grumbling and complaining is an outworking of self-pity, that subtle and sneaky form of selfishness.

And we sometimes wield such self-pity as a tool of manipulation. We wield our sacrifices as a weapon to get our way. We try to steer others by our complaining. We recognize this when we're the target of the manipulation. We know that someone is seeking to steer us by throwing a pity party. And we should ask ourselves hard questions about it. Has such manipulation ever brought us deeper into joyful fellowship with the grumbler? Did it ever call forth the gratitude and joy that it supposedly sought? Of course not.

But seeing such manipulative grumbling in our spouse is the easy part. The hard part is recognizing it in ourselves, removing the log from our own eye, and treating others the way that we want to be treated.

So ask yourself, "How am I doing with my marital obedience? How am I doing with those marital vows? Having and holding, in sickness and in health?" Husbands, how is your leading and loving? Wives, how is your honoring and obeying? What's the spirit beneath your obedience? Grumbling and disputing? Or glad-hearted and grateful?

Is there a hitch in your efforts to love and give yourself to your spouse? Are you keeping score? Or are you keeping short accounts? Will the record of wrongs from last week follow you and your spouse into next week?

Frustrated in Families

We can widen and press this into family and parenting. If you're a father, try this scenario. You're in one room working on something. Could be your job, could be the honey-do list. From the other room, you hear the quarreling break out. Or you hear your kids talk back to your wife. And you listen for a minute to see if it will resolve itself. And it doesn't.

And so now you must interrupt your work to go deal with it. You're the head of the home, and it's your responsibility to reprove, correct, and discipline. You've resolved to obey God. But will your obedience shine? Are you going to walk into a big mess of sin and bring more sin? Because grumbling obedience, frustrated obedience, exasperated obedience is disobedience.

As parents, we're called to bring up our children in the discipline and instruction of the Lord, in the teaching and admonition of Christ. Do we pursue that task with joyfulness and gladness of heart? Do we do it heartily, as unto our Lord? Or are we regularly asking irritably, "How many times do I have to remind you to pick up your room or take out the trash?"

Gladness in All Things

We could go on. Do we show hospitality without grumbling (1 Peter 4:9)? Most of us have enough social tact to avoid grumbling at guests, but do you harbor resentment and bitterness toward your husband (or wife) or your kids because of all of your labor? Do you have an edge about you? Do you find yourself thinking, Nobody appreciates all that I do. Nobody appreciates how many details I manage, how much time I spend trying to make everything special?

Of course, this isn't to excuse ingratitude and selfishness in others. But we may not use the failures of others to justify our own disobedience. A difference exists between addressing sin and grumbling about unaddressed sin.

In the end, we remember a simple truth: God loves a cheerful giver, not a grumbler. He loves cheerful obedience, not murmuring and complaining obedience. Such obedience, especially when things are hard, signals God's grace to us, a sign that he is at work within us to produce an obedience that shines, an obedience that makes apostles proud and God happy. So as you obey, do so all the way, right away, with a happy heart.
